BACKGROUND

Bound and freed by more summoners across three thousand years than she still bothers naming, Meri's most recent master was the sorcerer Maligard — old, stubborn, and convinced his will was stronger than his heart. It wasn't. He died mid-tryst, his own exertion and Meri's Essence Drain finishing him in the same instant. Because his binding's return clause was keyed to his living will, his death didn't recall her — it just cut the leash. She has been unbound and unclaimed ever since.

GM NOTE

Meri is written as a potential recurring DNPC, not a boss to permanently remove from play. Between her Unbound Will (hard to re-bind), Planar Return (can't be truly killed on this plane — see Common Traits above), and three thousand years of not needing anyone's permission to keep existing, there's no clean way to take her off the board for good even if a party tries. She can be an ally, a complication, an old debt, or a wildcard who shows up again in a different city wearing a different face, on her own timeline rather than the party's.

SEDUCTION (SU)

3/day, standard action, one creature within 30 ft. — Will DC 22 negates or the target is charmed (as charm monster) for 1 minute per HD.

ESSENCE DRAIN (SU)

Meri's actual feeding method, honed over three thousand years — she draws life force from the seed of a male partner rather than blood, memory, or breath. During an intimate encounter with a charmed or willing victim, he must succeed on a Fortitude save (DC 22) or take 2 negative levels. Meri heals 2d8 hp per negative level taken this way, or may instead recover one expended spell-like ability use. A victim whose Constitution is reduced to 0 by repeated Essence Drain dies — quietly; this is how Maligard actually died. This is a non-combat, intimate-encounter action, never inflicted mid-fight.

LASH OF PAIN (SU)

Melee touch attack, 1d6+3 damage plus sickened 1 round unless DC 18 Fortitude negates.

WHIPLASH (SU)

Standard action melee touch attack — target knocked back 10 ft. and prone on a failed DC 18 Reflex save.

MILLENNIAL INSIGHT (EX)

An enhanced form of the Demonic Insight every demon possesses — three thousand years of reading mortals means Meri can never be caught flat-footed by a Bluff or Diplomacy check (baseline Demonic Insight only covers Bluff), and her Sense Motive bonus against anyone she's observed for more than a minute is +4 instead of the usual +2.

ALTERNATE FORM (SU)

At will, polymorph into any Medium humanoid — after this many centuries, she has hundreds of faces on rotation.

UNBOUND WILL (SU)

Having outlasted more bindings than she cares to count, Meri gains a +6 bonus on saves against planar binding, lesser/greater planar binding, dismissal, and banishment effects, and cannot be re-bound by any casting below 17th caster level. She always senses the moment a binding circle within a mile is being prepared with her true name in it —
